* JAMES READ CHADWICK, 1905.

The address of the Class Secretary is 10 Tremont Street, Boston.

* Deceased.

TO THE CLASS OF 1865.

CLASSMATES:

WE all mourn our beloved and most excellent Class Secretary, Thomas Franklin Brownell, who has taken care of us for all the thirty-six years until his death in 1901, and has accounted for us in our wanderings or struggles, so far, at least, as we helped him to do so. Changes have been less frequent in our lives of late. We have settled down, and there is less to be told. To some of us honors and degrees have come of later years, as the new Class Secretary has tried to show. Some of our temporary members have attained distinction, as well as our learned graduates. There are some six of the graduates who have nothing to tell or will not tell it. I have stated what I could learn about them.

During the past seven years eleven of our graduates have died, and seven of our temporary members. I have tried to get some account of their life-work for your information. Since the last Report only two children have been born to the Class, the two boys of the present Class Secretary. This makes the whole number 157, not an average of two for the 88 who had degrees.

I have tried to give the statistics in the summary of our total membership, of children living, and of marriages and deaths, but cannot be sure they are complete or correct, for possible lack of information. Please keep me posted of changes of address or of any other changes in your surroundings.

Wishing you well and happy, and hoping to see you, every one, when the chance comes,

Your new and inexperienced Secretary,

GEORGE A. GODDARD,
Class Secretary.

BIOGRAPHICAL RECORDS OF THE CLASS OF 1865.

GRADUATED MEMBERS.

*FRANCIS JOHN ALISON. Born at Jennerville, Chester County, Pa., 16 May, 1843; died at Ardmore, Pa., 22 June, 1902, of apoplexy. The following is by Rev. William H. Miller, pastor of the Presbyterian church at Bryn Mawr:

"Our whole congregation has sustained a great loss in the death of Mr. Alison. He was so constant in his attendance upon our services, so loyal in his attachment to the church, so warmly interested in its work, so charming in his fellowship with us all, that we shall miss him very, very much. He was one who wore 'the white flower of a blameless life'; a man of sincere faith, of strong religious convictions, of stainless reputation, of chivalrous ideals. So much esteemed was he among us for his upright Christian character that, in spite of the fact that he had never taken any active share in our church meetings, he received a considerable number of votes from our best people at the informal ballot taken for nominations to the eldership a year or two ago. So tender and helpful and altogether beautiful were his relations to those nearest to him that we cannot but feel the deepest sympathy for them in their sore bereavement. But in reckoning our loss by reason of his promotion to a higher sphere of service to the Lord he loved we are conscious of a debt of gratitude to God for the gift of such a pure and gracious life."

The following paragraph, taken from the Public Ledger of the 24th inst., gives some historical items which are of interest to all who knew Mr. Alison:

"Francis J. Alison, who was stricken with apoplexy last Thursday at the offices of the Commercial Trust Company, Arcade Building, died Sunday night at his home in Ardmore, at the age of fifty-nine years.

"Mr. Alison was born in Chester County. His grandfather settled near Chatham on his return from his duties as a surgeon during the Revolutionary War. His father also followed the medical profession, practising near Chatham. Mr. Alison's great-grandfather was the Rev. Dr. Francis Alison, who was at one time rector of the Academy of Philadelphia and vice-provost of the College of Pennsylvania, which was afterward the University of Pennsylvania.

"Graduating from Harvard University in the Class of 1865, Mr. Alison was admitted to the Philadelphia bar. He was connected with the Commercial Trust, and was a director of the Young Men's Christian Association of Philadelphia and the Bryn Mawr Citizens' Association. His widow, who survives him, is a daughter of the late Fitz Eugene Dixon, and he has three daughters."

*FRANK EUSTACE ANDERSON. He died at Leipsic, Germany, 15 July, 1880. See Secretary's Report, No. 6.

LUDLOW APJONES. Is now living near Tremont City, Clark County, Ohio, R. F. D. No. 1. No further word than this can be got from him.

ROBERT HALE BANCROFT. "Since I went out of business a good many years ago, I have lived in Boston [and Beverly], with the exception of several years passed in Europe.

"I have taken an active interest in the work and development of the Associated Charities of Boston, and also in the Boston Co-operative Building Company, and am at present a director in both of these societies."

Address: 249 Beacon Street, Boston.

*GEORGE BLIGHT. He died in London, 16 March, 1877. See Secretary's Report, No. 5.

WILLIAM ELBRIDGE BOARDMAN. Has nothing of special importance to tell, except of some written and oral communications to medical societies. His only special honorary position was president of the Alumni Association of the Boston City Hospital, 1901–02. He is still in the practice of medicine in Boston, and is medical examiner for an insurance company.

Address: 388 Marlborough Street, Boston.

JOHN QUINCY ADAMS BRACKETT. He has remained in the practice of the law in Boston. His residence is Arlington, Mass.

In addition to his many other offices held, including Governor of Massachusetts in 1890, he was delegate-at-large from Massachusetts to the Republican National Convention at Minneapolis in 1892; and in that connection the member from Massachusetts of the Committee on Resolutions and a member of the Sub-committee on the Currency Question. He was first presidential elector-at-large from Massachusetts in 1896, and chairman of the Massachusetts electors; again presidential elector-at-large in 1900. He belongs to the Boston Club, the Massachusetts Club, the Home Market Club, the Republican Club of Massachusetts, to the Boston Art Club, the Arlington Boat Club, the Arlington Golf Club, the Boston Mercantile Library Association, and the Young Men's Christian Union.

He had a long and severe illness in 1905. His son, John Gaylord Brackett, graduated at Harvard in 1901 and from the Harvard Law School in 1904, and is now practising law in Boston.

Address: 15 Beacon Street, Boston.

JOHN HENRY BRADFORD. Has continued his interest in the Jockey Club and the Coney Island Jockey Club of New York, and enjoys life, though much troubled by a nervous disease and walking with difficulty. Since 1897 he has resided at 279 Lexington Avenue, New York City. He gives his occupation as treasurer.

Address: 571 Fifth Avenue, New York.

*THOMAS FRANKLIN BROWNELL. He was born in New Bedford, Mass., 3 January, 1842, and died in New York City, 7 January, 1901. He was admitted to the Massachusetts bar in 1868, and to that of New York and the United States Circuit Court in 1868. He began to practise law in New York in 1868, and continued his practice there until his death.

He was an example of the best type of Harvard man. His zeal in behalf of his Alma Mater and her interests was untiring, and whatever he did was done without thought of praise or reward.

As Secretary of his Class, his scholarly qualities, his indefatigable industry, orderly methods, and mastery of detail, which made him valuable to every organization to which he belonged, made him the ideal class secretary. Best of all, his work for his Class was literally a labor of love. His Class Reports are the model upon which nearly all secretaries since his time have framed their work.

He was a member of the old Harvard Club of New York City, and was its treasurer for ten years. He was identified with the present Harvard Club from its beginning, was one of its incorporators, and served as member of the Board of Managers and as chairman of the Committee on Literature and Art, which two latter positions he held at the time of his death. He never wearied in collecting for the club whatever told the story of Harvard and her sons, giving his time and labor without stint.

He became a member of the University Club in New York City upon its organization. For sixteen (16) years, and during a most important period of the growth and development of the club, he held the responsible position of secretary of the Committee on Admissions. His services to the club in this office were so great that the desire was generally expressed by those interested in the club and having the most complete knowledge of the value of his services that he should receive a valuable testimonial of some kind from the members of the club; but he refused to accept any reward or any public recognition of his services. The collection of "Harvard Memorabilia" which he made for the club library, a work occupying several years of leisure time, is a monument of most intelligent, able, and comprehensive labor. At the time of his death he was a member of the Council and chairman of the Committee on Literature and Art; and in the installation of the library in the new building and its organization on an improved and more extensive system he showed the same intelligence and conscientious care which characterized all his acts.

He was a member of the Century Association, and at the time of his death was chairman of its Committee on Admissions. He was also a member of the Phi Beta Kappa, the Barnard Club, and the Civil Service Reform Association, all of New York City.

His was a rare character and a most lovable nature.

One of his classmates wrote of him: "In any comment upon him, either during his life or since his death, I have never heard the disparaging word 'but' employed. Of very few men can that be truly said."

The things of the spirit had stronger attraction for him than fame or wealth. His life was an example of simplicity and modesty in all things. Contentment, peace of mind, leisure for the work he loved, the affection of troops of friends, were a few of the things in which he was rich beyond most men.

Quiet, conscientious, unselfish, a sincere friend, a true and courteous gentleman, and the most modest and unassuming of men, his companionship will be missed and his memory cherished by those who knew and loved him.

ALBERT CLARK BUZELL. He has remained in Exeter, N.H.; is a lawyer (retired). He belongs to the Musical Club and the Renaissance Club. He has never married.

Address: Exeter, N.H.

*JOHN WILKINS CARTER. He died 5 July, 1895, at Harwich, Mass. See Secretary's Report, No. 9.

*JAMES READ CHADWICK. He was born in Boston, 2 November, 1844, the son of Christopher Champlin and Louisa Read Chadwick. He married in Boston, 11 May, 1871, Katharine Maria Lyman, by whom he had three daughters and one son. She died many years ago. He died in Chocorua, N.H., 24 September, 1905, by accident, from falling out of an unsafe window, where he had gone during a sleepless night and in a condition of illness to get the relief of open air. He had been ailing at times before, but on that evening had been very ill.

He wrote in the spring of 1905: "Since the last Report (1900) he has continued to practise medicine in Boston, to serve as librarian of the Boston Medical Library and president of the Massachusetts Cremation Society." As to offices held and societies and clubs, he wrote, "It is impossible to recapitulate these after forty years." He also wrote, "At the dedication of the New Building of the Boston Medical Library, January 12, 1901, he delivered an address, and has since written and published the 26th, 27th, and 28th Annual Reports as librarian." "On June 5, 1902, he delivered the annual oration before the Maine Medical Association on the subject of 'Medical Libraries.'"

"In the number of the Medical Library and Historical Journal for April, 1903, he published a description of the 'Boston Medical Library.'"

"On June 6, 1904, he was elected president of the Association of Medical Librarians."

"On January 26, 1905, he was elected a Fellow of the Colonial Society of Massachusetts."

"On April 18, 1905, he read 'A Brief Sketch of the Life of his Grandfather, James Read, 1789–1870,' before the Hyde Park Historical Society."

"On May 12, 1905, he read a paper on 'Cremation of the Dead' before the American Social Science Association."

"On June 10, 1905, he delivered the annual address as president of the Association of Medical Librarians, held in Boston, his subject being 'Dr. Johann David Schoepf, Surgeon of the Anspach-Bayreuth Troops in America, 1777–1784.'"

He was made an additional member of the Class Committee in June, 1904.

From the pen of a classmate I may add the following:

"To complete the brief record given by Chadwick to the Class Secretary, we may add that he has published the following papers:

"Transactions of the American Gynecological Society, edited by the Secretary, James R. Chadwick, 1878–1882.

"Boston Medical Library. Annual Reports of the Librarian.

"Yearly Indexes of Gynecological and Obstetric Literature of All Countries for the Years 1876 to 1880, Inclusive, in Trans. of Amer. Gynec. Soc., 1878–1882 (v. 2–6).

"He has also held the following offices: physician to out-patients of the Gynecological Department of the Boston City Hospital, 1875–1882; vice-president of the Harvard Graduates' Magazine Association since 1893; librarian of the Boston Medical Library since 1875; president of the Association of Medical Librarians, 1904; member of the Papyrus Club; member of St. Botolph Club; member of the Porcellian Club of Harvard University.

"The Class Reports, however, give little idea of Chadwick's activity and usefulness in the world. In the various associations which he was prominent in founding, if others took a share of the work, he was always the one who felt the pulse of the community and knew when it was ready, after the proper amount of urging, to take the necessary step in advance. This is pre-eminently true as to the American Gynecological Society, the Massachusetts Cremation Society, the Boston Medical Library, the Harvard Medical Alumni Association, and the Association of Medical Librarians. None of these were undertakings that required only one push to set them in motion and to keep them moving, but each demanded and received from Chadwick long-continued, patient agitation and effort.

"The Boston Medical Library was, no doubt, his greatest triumph. Very soon after he started to practise medicine, he began to talk about a medical library, but at first the leaders of the profession turned a deaf ear to the story of his scheme. However, on August 20, 1875, the library was organized and officers were elected. Dr. O. W. Holmes was chosen president, and Chadwick of course librarian. The library had neither books nor a home, but started with a small room on Hamilton Place. It seemed a great step when the old house of Samuel G. Howe in Boylston Place was purchased and remodelled for a library, but on January 12, 1901, the present beautiful building at 8 The Fenway was opened, and received the great accumulation of medical books which had been stored in (see Dr. Farlow's Report) 'Jamaica Plain, Forest Hills, and other places, and were now brought here, and deposited in the basement, filling three rooms from floor to ceiling. The separation of these thousands of journals according to language, country, subject, year, and then in chronological order, the taking out of what was needed for our own files and the proper disposal of the remainder, was work of about three years; and here Dr. Chadwick was found several hours a day, nearly every day, including holidays and Sundays, and often also in the evening.

"'What he accomplished and with what labor is probably known to but few of you, but it made a great impression upon me.

"'In 1877, when I was a medical student, I helped him, in a very small way, to arrange the books and periodicals then beginning to accumulate in the rooms in Hamilton Place. Twenty-five years later I saw in him the same intense interest, the readiness to work, the contagious enthusiasm, and I wondered how many men of sixty years were as eager to work, mentally and physically, as they were at thirty-five.

"'He lived to see the medical books and periodicals of the Boston Athenæum, Harvard College, the Tiedemann Library, and the Boston Public Library, deposited in this library, which he had hoped would be the Academy of Medicine, the medical centre of Greater Boston, even of New England.

"'When we look about in this building for the room reserved for his use, for his desk, for anything pertaining to him alone, we find nothing. There is no librarian's room, he had no desk, no closet, no drawer, merely a small wire basket in one corner of a shelf in the cataloguer's room, in which were placed various memoranda, old catalogues, and odds and ends.

"'The whole library building was his field of action.'

"At the thirtieth annual meeting, which took place not long after Chadwick's death, it was reported that there were in the library 19,612 volumes and 22,629 pamphlets.

"During these thirty years Chadwick had been the only librarian, and Dr. Farlow, who as chairman of the Library Committee was obliged to take up the duties of the librarian temporarily and to report on the library, says of Chadwick that he 'more than any one else contributed to its progress by his interest, knowledge, tenacity of purpose, and particularly by his enthusiasm. The story of the library is practically the story of his activity.'

"Chadwick was the main agitator in the movement to allow women physicians to become members of the Massachusetts Medical Society, and this was at last accomplished in spite of great opposition, —difficult to understand now.

"He was fluent and entertaining in conversation and ready at debate, and, though often obliged through the unpopular position in which he placed himself to defend himself vigorously, he generally managed to end his argument with a laugh instead of a sting.

"In 1890 Chadwick called the meeting which led to the formation of the Harvard Medical Alumni Association, and was elected chairman of the Committee of Organization, and subsequently first president of the association.

"Few men in our Class are as well known and to as many members of the Class as Chadwick was. Few have attended as many Class meetings and dinners or done as much as he to make them enjoyable by way of arranging plans, preparing programmes, and stirring up conversation.

"We all know him as a ceaseless agitator for schemes that he believed would benefit the Class, the college, and the university. Some of us, perhaps, disagreed with him on certain points, some on certain others, yet, on the one hand, we always found him sticking to his views, and, on the other hand, we never found him harboring or stirring up any ill feeling against those who disagreed with him.

"We must also recall that self-seeking never had any place in his activities,—that the question as to how any plan he was advancing would affect him never seemed to enter into his calculation.

"He objected to all eulogy, and on one occasion, when it was proposed to celebrate his work by means of a portrait, he said, if his work was good, he only hoped it would be carried on by others, and that was the only memorial he wished for." C. P. P.

ALBRO ELMORE CHASE. He holds high positions in the Free Masons, the Odd Fellows, and the Red Men. He says, "I have nothing to add to that which has been already recorded, as I have resided and worked along my lines right here." He writes, 8 June, 1907, "I left the principalship of the Portland (Me.) High School at the close of the school year, June, 1906."

Address: Portland, Me.

*JOHN WESLEY CHURCHILL. He died 13 April, 1900, at Andover, Mass. See Secretary's Report, No. 9. His youngest son, Lieutenant Marlborough Churchill, U.S.A., and Miss Mary Smith, of Andover, were married 7 October, 1903.

CHARLES WARREN CLIFFORD. He still continues in New Bedford in the practice of the law. He has served on many commissions for revision of laws and other purposes, belongs to many societies, legal, historical, and charitable, and is director in many corporations. He has also done a little yachting, and belongs to many clubs.

Address: New Bedford, Mass.

*JOSEPH COOK. He died at his summer place, Cliff Seat, Ticonderoga, N.Y., 25 June, 1901, after a long illness caused by excessive work for twenty years or more. See Secretary's Report, No. 9.

HORATIO GREENOUGH CURTIS. He has continued president of the Old Boston National Bank, residing in Boston, at 179 Marlborough Street in winter and at Nahant in summer. He has held several public positions. He was one of the trustees in the settlement of the John P. Squire Corporation. He often writes to the newspapers on finance. He often goes to Europe.

Address: 50 State Street, Boston.

*WALTER DABNEY. He died in Boston, 20 December, 1899. See Secretary's Report, No. 9.

*GEORGE WALES DILLAWAY. He died at Waverley, Mass., 7 May, 1898. See Secretary's Report, No. 9.

*LEWIS ALLEN DODGE. He died 18 February, 1903, jumping overboard, outside of Newport, R.I., from the steamer "Plymouth" bound for New York. He had had nervous prostration, and had lately been to the South for his health. He was employed at the Boston Custom House as chief liquidating clerk in the naval office from 1876 to 1886, when he was removed by President Cleveland, as was said, "for the good of the service," though supported by Republican friends. In 1889 he was appointed by President Harrison assistant appraiser, and in 1891 appraiser, at the Boston Custom House, but was afterwards removed after a long fight. He was a member of the Common Council of Medford for a year soon after the city was incorporated, and was afterwards alderman in Medford. He was well known in politics in Medford.

*ORLANDO WITHERSPOON DOE. He died in Boston, Mass., 10 December, 1890. See Secretary's Report, No. 8.

*WALTER HENRY DORR. He died at South Boston, 17 June, 1880. See Secretary's Report, No. 6.

WILLIAM BULLARD DURANT. He has continued in the practice of law in Boston, residing in Cambridge. He has been president of the Cambridge Water Board for five years or more. He belongs to the Colonial Club and a few others, and has resigned from the Home Market Club because he thinks its protection ideas too extreme. His oldest son graduated in 1902, his second graduated in 1906, and his third entered in 1906, "all at Harvard, of course."

Address: 87 Milk Street, Boston, Mass.

CHARLES JAMES ELLIS. He still continues in the moderate practice of the law at Los Angeles, having been notary public since 1894. He is interested in other matters, having been on the Board of Education there in 1890 to 1892, and has been since 1888 chairman of the Ellis Club, founded for singing by male chorus. He is president of the Harvard Club of Southern California, 1905. In 1907 he was in charge of the Harvard Examinations in Southern California. He has gone to Europe, July, 1907.

Address: 2320 Scarff Street, Los Angeles City, Cal.

WILLIAM HENRY FISH. He resigned the pastorate of his church in Colorado Springs, April 1, 1901. He had helped to organize this church. He sailed with his wife for Naples, April 13, 1902, staying abroad until September. He was matriculated in the Universities of Geneva and Berlin, and attended lectures also at the Sorbonne in Paris. January 1, 1903, he took charge of the First Unitarian Society of Salt Lake City, and helped them to erect a building of their own, "Unity Hall," and to get out of debt. He resigned January 1, 1905, and on March 1, 1905, was settled as minister of the Independent Congregational Church (Unitarian) of Meadville, Pa. His father died in the winter of 1905–06.

Address: 953 South Main Street, Meadville, Pa.

*GEORGE ALBERT FISHER. "Was born in Dorchester, 12 August, 1840. He graduated from the Dorchester High School, and entered Phillips Exeter Academy, to prepare for college.

"Entered college in 1861, as of the Class of 1865. In college he was quiet and studious, not seeing very much of his classmates.

"29 December, 1863, he was commissioned Second Lieutenant in the 5th Massachusetts Cavalry Volunteers, Colonel Henry S. Russell (H. U. 1860) commanding, and assigned to Company E. He at once left college, and joined the regiment. This was a new negro regiment being recruited in camp at Readville, Mass.

"Fisher left camp with the regiment in May, 1864, for City Point, Va., where the regiment, which had not yet been mounted, was armed with muskets, and served in the trenches with General B. F. Butler, who was at Bermuda Hundreds. The regiment took part in the attack on Petersburg, Va., under General Baldy Smith, in June. At Bailey's Farm, the most serious engagement the regiment was in, the loss was three officers and fifty men killed and wounded. Fisher was in this fight with his company, and acquitted himself with credit to his regiment and his Class.

"At the end of June, 1864, the regiment was ordered to Point Lookout, Md., to guard rebel prisoners and to be mounted. The winter was spent there on guard duty and drilling the men in the care and use of horses. 5 July, 1864, Fisher was promoted First Lieutenant of Company E. The latter part of March, 1865, the regiment was ordered to Deep Bottom, Va., and attached to the 24th Army Corps. On 3 April, 1865, the regiment entered Richmond among the first troops to go in, and remained in various camps near Richmond until June, when the regiment was ordered to join the 25th Corps, General Weitzel commanding, and to go to Texas under the supreme command of General Sheridan. As the war was over, Fisher sent in his resignation on 24 June, before sailing for Texas. His resignation was accepted, but his discharge did not reach him until August, when he was in camp at Clarksville, Tex., by the mouth of the Rio Grande. He came home at once. He proved himself a good officer, always reliable and efficient. He was popular and beloved by both officers and men, while his departure from the regiment was deeply regretted.

"He entered the Law School in September, 1865, and took his degree of LL.B. in three terms. He was admitted to the bar in 1867. He also made up and passed the omitted examinations of his Senior year in college, and received his degree of A.B., as of the Class of 1865, 17 July, 1867.

"He then entered the office of Chandler, Shattuck & Thayer. He married, 6 December, 1870, Fanny Ellen Carew, of Dorchester, by whom he had a son, Edgar Griffiths Fisher, born 17 October, 1873; a daughter, Bertha Fisher, born 19 November, 1877; a son, George Harold Fisher, born 20 April, 1884. His wife died, 24 August, 1884, after a long and painful sickness. He married his second wife, Laura J. Dyer, 16 June, 1886, but had no children by her. She survives him.

"23 February, 1871, Fisher was appointed Associate Justice of the Dorchester Municipal Court, and held that office until his death. 1 January, 1874, he formed a copartnership with George V. Leverett (H. U. 1867).

"He was a member of the Boston Common Council in 1879 and 1880. In 1883 he became a member and clerk of the corporation of the Franklin Savings Bank, and also its legal adviser. These duties took a large part of his time, most of it being spent in the Registry of Deeds, looking up titles.

"In 1887 he joined the Ancient and Honorable Artillery Company, and remained a member until his death.

"He was also a member at the time of his death of Post 68 of the Grand Army of the Republic, of the Royal Arcanum, the Good Fellows' Club, and the American Legion of Honor.

"He died in Boston, 22 February, 1903, greatly lamented by all his friends. His death is a distinct loss to our Class and the community.

"Fisher was a very hard-working man, and, apart from the above clubs, mingled but little in society. He had very few or no interests outside of his business, spending almost all his leisure time at home. He read a great deal, including both light and heavy reading, and was especially fond of music. He rarely attended the Class dinners and meetings. He was a man of good legal mind and training, very faithful to all his duties, but very modest and retiring in disposition, not at all free in making acquaintances.

"In this sketch of his life his services in the army have been, perhaps, enlarged on too much, but that was really his one great excitement, the latter part having been a quiet one, consisting of hard work and home pleasures." P. T. J.

*ISAAC VANDERPOEL FRENCH. He died in New York City, 22 February, 1879. See Secretary's Report, No. 6.

WILLIAM ABRAMS FRENCH. He writes from Chicago, April, 1905, "After spending the better part of a year under the hospitable roof of General Rosser at Charlottesville, Va., I have recovered my health, and last year accepted a favorable opportunity to enter into active business in this city, where my wife and I have many friends and a pleasant home." He was then for a time in the Electric Automatic Manufacturing Company. Later, in July, 1905, he writes, "Please change my address to my Boston office." He became agent of the Union Central Life Insurance Company at Boston. He has four children and seven grandchildren.

Address: 79 Milk Street, Boston, Mass.

GEORGE SEWARD FROST. He writes: "Little to report. Still practising law in Dover, still Justice of Police Court, still Senior Warden of St. Thomas' Church, director Strafford National Bank, thirty-second degree Mason, member of Bellamy Club."

A grandson, George Frost Sawyer, was born 25 June, 1902.

Address: 119 Locust Street, Dover, N.H.

GEORGE AUGUSTUS GODDARD. He continues to live in Boston in winter and in Beverly Farms in summer. He has been for about thirty years treasurer of the New England Hospital for Women and Children in Roxbury; for some twenty-nine years clerk of the Associated Charities of Boston; for nearly twenty-three years treasurer of the Goddard Land Company of Brookline.

He is a justice of the peace, belongs to about thirteen clubs and to a number of musical societies as a listener. He is still scribe of the Triangle Club.

He served his three years' term as an unpaid trustee of the Boston Insane Hospital, but was not reappointed.

He has two sons, born 24 January, 1900, and 11 August, 1902, and has lived in his present house, in Boston, under varying conditions for forty-seven years.

He was made successor to our lamented Class Secretary in June, 1901.

Address: 10 Tremont Street, Boston, Mass.

*WILLIAM JASON GOLD. He died in Chicago, 11 January, 1903, after an illness of two months. He had been since 1885 an instructor in the Western Theological Seminary, the Episcopal Theological School of Chicago, twelve years as sub-dean and six years at the head of the school as warden. He has held other offices. He was for twelve years editor-in-chief of the Living Church, and has contributed to other periodicals.

FRANCIS BUNKER GREENE. After having early begun to learn the wool business, he studied law, was admitted to the bar in 1869, and practised law until December, 1886, when he ceased to practise actively. He is director in several New Bedford corporations. He lost his wife after a long and painful illness, 22 December, 1905. He has continued to live in Boston in winter and near New Bedford, at his country place, in summer.

Address: P.O. box 452, New Bedford, Mass.

*ALFRED GREENOUGH. He died at Rangoon, Burma, 6 June, 1884. See Secretary's Report, No. 6.

DAVID STODDARD GREENOUGH. He writes (the best knowledge we have): "A rolling stone. Started business after leaving college as laborer in a woollen mill in Hyde Park, which later sent me abroad to study foreign wool machinery; next ran a mill in Circleville, Ohio; next employed in New York merchant's office; next as railroad employee in various capacities at Elmira, N.Y.; next in a paper mill at Hardwick, Mass.; next in business with Abram French & Co., china, etc., in Boston; next in the business management of several telephone companies. And I have finally settled, I hope, with desk-room in the office of George Goddard, who is trying to make me into a reputable and useful citizen according to Boston standards."

He still lives in Jamaica Plain in winter and in East Gloucester in summer.

Address: 10 Tremont Street, Boston, Mass.

JOHN GREENOUGH. He writes: "Retired from business as a banker, September 1, 1898, after an active commercial career of twenty-six years, the latter part largely occupied with corporate and railway administration. Have resigned, as far as possible, from all such responsibilities, and seek henceforth the 'enjoyments of serenity, not of excitement,' as Fiske says.'" He is still trustee of the American Geographical Society, of the New York Kindergarten Association, and the New York Association for Improving the Condition of the Poor. He belongs to a number of clubs. He lives in the new house he has built at 38 East 63d Street, New York, and in summer at East Gloucester.

Address: 59 Wall Street, New York, N.Y.

*JAMES IRA HANSON. He died at Woburn, Mass., 15 April, 1888. See Secretary's Report, No. 7.

GEORGE ANTHONY HILL. He still lives in Cambridge, and is very busy, especially before examinations, as private tutor.

Address: 6 Fairfax Hall, Cambridge, Mass.

FRANK MERRICK HOLLISTER. He is editor of the Buffalo Commercial, and has lived in the same place for many years, rarely leaving home. He belongs to the Historical Society, the Fine Arts Academy, and the Buffalo Charity Organization Society, is dean of the Saturn Club and member of the Thursday Club, also of the Buffalo and University Clubs, and of the Harvard Club, of which he was president, 1903 to 1905. He was appointed by Governor Odell a manager of the State Industrial School, Rochester.

Address: 186 North Street, Buffalo, N.Y.

*JABEZ SILAS HOLMES. He died at the Profile House, New Hampshire, 13 September, 1884. See Secretary's Report, No. 6.

HENRY HOOPER. He has continued in the practice of medicine and surgery in Chicago. He has remained treasurer of the Polyclinic Hospital for twenty years. He was president of the Passavant Hospital Medical Staff in 1903–04. He is a member of the American Medical State and City Societies. He belongs to several clubs, the Physicians, the Hamilton Republican, the Saddle and Cycle, the Edgewater Golf, and the Huron Mt., Lake Superior.

Address: 10 Astor Street, Chicago, Ill.

EDWARD DOWNER HOSMER. Not heard from. I am informed he has had prolonged and serious illness, and has had a hard time. He has partly regained his health, and is occupied with the real estate business.

Address: 138 Washington Street, Chicago, Ill.

*JAMES OTIS HOYT. He died 6 December, 1896. See Secretary's Report, No. 9.

WALTER HUNNEWELL. He has continued to live in Boston in winter and Wellesley in summer. He served on the unpaid Board of Trustees of Pauper Institutions of Boston until the upset and removal of those trustees by Mayor Collins, but he was afterwards appointed to the new board, and has done valuable work there until the whole board was ousted by Mayor Fitzgerald.

Address: 87 Milk Street, Boston, Mass.

PATRICK TRACY JACKSON. He is still in the cotton business, his firm being Jackson & Riddle. Is still living at 25 Follen Street, Cambridge, in winter, and at Pride's Crossing in summer.

In the spring of 1904 he went on a trip to Bolivia to visit his second son, who was in business there, living at Sorata with his wife. He crossed the isthmus at Panama, and went over the Andes Mountains by rail, by steamer and by mule, being gone about three months.

His youngest son is now in Europe, studying advanced chemistry. His three other children are married. He has four grandchildren. He is still treasurer of the Eastern Yacht Club and chairman of Standing Committee of First Parish in Cambridge. He belongs to several clubs.

Address: 53 State Street, Boston.

*GEORGE JOTHAM JOHNSON. He died at Old Orchard Beach, Me., 27 August, 1885. See Secretary's Report, No. 6.

*ALBERT RIPLEY LEEDS. He died at his home, "Roadside," in Germantown, Pa., 13 March, 1902. The following is from the New York Evening Post:

"Professor Leeds of the Stevens Institute of Technology, who died in Philadelphia yesterday, was born in that city, June 27, 1843. He came of a line of Americans many of whom have been devoted to engineering and scientific pursuits, a colonist of his name being in 1680 the surveyor-general of New Jersey, and the publisher, through William Bradford, printer, of the first book in America published south of the Massachusetts Bay Colony. This was an almanac, continued for thirty-five years, and then replaced by a much better one, published by Dr. Benjamin Franklin.

"Professor Leeds was graduated from the high school of Philadelphia in 1860, and then entered the Freshman Class at Harvard University, remaining there during the four years of the Civil War, taking his degree in 1865. Before graduation he was appointed professor of chemistry in the Philadelphia High School, and during the following year to equivalent chairs in the Franklin Institute, the Philadelphia Dental College, and Haverford College. The three latter professorships necessitated incessant lecturing and teaching, and, in the attempt to discharge these duties, his health broke down. Resigning them in 1869, he went abroad, and spent two years in travel and study in England, France, Italy, and Germany.

"On his return he was requested to organize the department of chemistry at the Stevens Institute of Technology. During the next five years he contributed a number of papers on new mineral species and upon lithology which were published in the American Journal of Science. Subsequently the teaching of analytical chemistry occupied most of his time, and thirty papers upon this topic were published in the Fresenius Zeitschrift, the Chemical News, and elsewhere.

"Later, on his election as presiding officer of the American Chemical Society and secretary of the New York Academy of Sciences, he turned his attention to technical and general chemistry, publishing many papers thereon. Since 1872 he had been chemist to the Water Boards of Newark and Jersey City, and had filled the same position for Hoboken, Albany, New London, Jamestown, Philadelphia, Reading, Wilmington, Plymouth, Ottawa, and other cities. The College of New Jersey conferred the degree of doctor of philosophy in 1878.

"Since 1881 he had been a member of the New Jersey State Board of Health and chairman of its Council of Analysts. In 1886, having been elected as foreign member of the British Association for the Advancement of Science, he spent the summer in England, and also that of 1889 and the year following. He was a Fellow of the corresponding society in America, and of the American, English, and German Chemical Societies, and of the American and New England Associations of Water Works Engineers, etc."

The following is from the New York Sunday News:

"Long after Dr. Albert Ripley Leeds, professor of chemistry in the Stevens Institute, Hoboken, received his death warrant from the physicians, he remained at his post, eager to do his work to the last, until his physical strength failed utterly.

"He had been told that he could live no longer than Easter, and that the end might come before that. He concealed this until it could no longer be kept a secret, and worked with all the energy he could summon,—worked cheerfully and earnestly, in the hope that he might carry his classes to a point where they would miss him least. His death occurred last Thursday.

"There is a sublime and majestic heroism in such courage and determination,—something that is tremendously dramatic in the devotion of a teacher who is willing to hasten his own end, who is willing to endure frightful physical torture, that those under his charge may benefit.

"Dr. Leeds had grown up with Stevens Institute. He was one of the original seven members of the Faculty. He was but twenty-eight years old when it was started in 1871. He contributed enormously to the honors it has gained. He looked upon the honors and the reputation he won as a tribute to it. Its students were his children. He worked with tremendous energy for it and for them.

"For more than a year his health had been failing. He suffered, but would not rest. During the Christmas holidays the physicians of Germantown, Pa., where he had been living the past two or three years, told him that he was suffering from an incurable disease,—cancer of the stomach.

"With the spirit of thoroughness of the scientific man, Dr. Leeds consulted the specialists of Johns Hopkins University in Baltimore. They confirmed the diagnosis of the Philadelphia doctors.

"Dr. Leeds received their report as calmly as he did the first news.

"'How long have I to live?'" he asked. 'I have much work to do.'

"They told him that Easter was the latest, very likely the end would come before that, certainly he could not live longer.

"Dr. Leeds returned to his classes after the holidays. He was as cheerful, as enthusiastic, as hopeful as of old. There was nothing to indicate that he had received his death warrant unless it was that he hurried the work of the classes faster than was his wont.

"No one in the institution knew that he was dying. They knew that he was ill, but they did not dream of his frightful suffering.

"The weeks sped swiftly, and the ravages of the disease increased. All the scientific knowledge stored in his great mind, and in that of all the men living, could not stay it.

"In the middle of February Dr. Leeds became so weak that he knew he must give up the work. The announcement that he was to leave the Institute because of ill-health moved the students, but they thought it only temporary.

"When the four classes were summoned on February 20 to bid good-bye to Dr. Leeds, not one of the students knew what was coming. They were profoundly sorry, because they loved him, but they were not prepared to be serious.

"The president of each class made a little speech, to which Dr. Leeds replied. It was H. M. Johnson, president of the Junior Class, who perhaps more nearly than the other speakers voiced the sentiments of the student body.

" 'This day can never be forgotten,' he said, 'for your patience, your justice, your generosity, your kindness to us all, have made an indelible impression on our college career.

" 'Our class-room acquaintance with you has been of the pleasantest to us. At times we may have seemed ungrateful; maybe at times, I am sorry to say, we may have seemed ungentlemanly; but I trust you regarded it only as thoughtlessness, for such it was.

" 'Not one of us would have intentionally hurt the feelings of one who, to use a college man's expression, was known as the "whitest man in college."'

"New strength seemed to come to Professor Leeds. He raised his emaciated body, and his trembling voice was heavy with tears.

" 'Dear friends,' he said, 'I would not say these words, and I would not say the few that are to come, without your touching sympathy had deeply moved me.

" 'It is always with a shrinking feeling that we tear aside the veil that screens our own sorrows, our own consciousness. But in this parting hour let me say to you that a month ago, like a thunderbolt out of a perfectly serene and unclouded sky, came the word from the best specialists in Philadelphia and from Johns Hopkins Hospital that I had but a few months to live.

" 'And I do not know why a man who seems like a worn-out tool in the workshop, only fit to be thrown aside,—I do not see why such a man should be here longer to encumber the ground; yet at this moment the thought has come to me that in the prolongation of my life to this moment, in the present great happiness and pleasure of this hour in meeting you, in being told that the lessons imperfectly and feebly taught and urged should already form a treasured part of your life, I may see some reason, as I say, for the prolongation of my life to this moment and a source of great rejoicing.'

"There were few in the room who were not weeping when the trembling tones ceased. And, when it sounded again, the tears broke out afresh.

"'And now, dear friends,' it said, 'good-bye. Let me take each one of you by the hands for the last time.'

"It was the saddest leave-taking the institution ever has known.

"Dr. Leeds went to his home in Germantown, beautiful old, vine-covered 'Roadside' as it is called, and which he bought a few years ago because of its beauty. He was born in Philadelphia, as was his wife.

"Peacefully and calmly he waited for the end, praying only to be relieved of pain.

"The student body at Stevens talked about presenting Dr. Leeds with some tribute, but it dragged along simply because it is careless, like all student bodies.

"One day word was brought that action must be taken quickly, or it would be too late. A mass meeting was called immediately, and more than $200 was raised.

"A loving cup was purchased and suitably inscribed. A week ago yesterday the presidents of the four classes, F. J. Youngblood, H. W. Johnson, A. G. Beckenbaum, and E. O. Heyworth, took the cup to Philadelphia to give it to Dr. Leeds.

"He was waiting to receive them in the drawing-room.

"They gave him the cup that carried with it the love and sympathy of the whole Institute. They could scarcely speak for the grief that choked them. And Dr. Leeds could scarcely reply.

"He told them that it was the happiest moment of his life, the crowning of his labors, and fell, fainting.

"They took him in their arms,—the strong arms of youth,—and the four who had been his pupils carried him to his bed. He never left it again, for death claimed him five days later."

*NATHANIEL COLVER LEEDS. He died in Cambridge, Mass., 4 December, 1867. See Secretary's Report, No. 2.

LOUIS CHARLES LEWIS. He remains in New York City in the practice of the law.

Address: 66 Broadway, New York, N.Y.

CHARLES JAIRUS LINCOLN. He has continued since 1895 as head-master of the Dorchester High School.

He writes: "Life has been during the past few years not a very varied one, but full of work, with the responsibilities of a rapidly growing school (now numbering nearly 1,200 pupils) and with the enlarging scope of a modern secondary institution. The only additional office which has fallen to me in the period is that of director and treasurer of the Robert B. Brigham Hospital."

Address: 652 Commercial Street, East Weymouth, Mass.

ROLAND CROCKER LINCOLN. He has continued in the practice of the law in Boston, and has lived at 269 Beacon Street, Boston, in winter and at Manchester, Mass., in the summer. He has been active in town duties in Manchester, his legal residence. He belongs to several clubs.

Address: 346 Tremont Building, Boston, Mass.

ROBERT CLINDENON McILWAIN. He is still rector of St. John's Protestant Episcopal Church in Keokuk, Ia. He has held this position for thirty-four years. He took the degree of M.D. at the College of Physicians and Surgeons in Keokuk in 1891, but did not practise the profession.

Address: Keokuk, Lee County, Ia.

GEORGE HARRISON MIFFLIN. He is senior member of the firm of Houghton, Mifflin & Co., a "publishing house," which also "owns and controls the Riverside Press." He has "had continuous connection with that firm since 1867."

His winter home is at 85 Marlborough Street, Boston, and his two summer homes are at North Andover and Nahant.

Address: 4 Park Street, Boston.

LEBBEUS HORATIO MITCHELL. His headquarters are at Hotel Austin and the Harvard Club, Los Angeles, Cal. He is travelling much of the time on mining exploration. He is a "Geologist and Expert Mining Engineer."

He has published: "Report on my Capture by the Abyssinians" (official), 1877; "Report on the Relation of Geology to Petroleum at Ras Gemsah and Gebel Zait (Red Sea)," 1887. He writes, "I was captured by the Abyssinians, February 1, 1877, when attached as scientist and explorer to the staff of the Egyptian Army during one of my explorations near the Abyssinian border."

Ellis writes, 12 April, 1905: "Mitchell is with a party headed by ex-Senator Dorsey. They left here a few weeks ago to examine some properties in Mexico which Dorsey owns, the colonel being engaged in a professional capacity." "Mitchell is the oldest man in '65, being now 71, I believe, but doesn't look it." Mitchell writes to Ellis from "Soyapia, Yaqui River, Sonora, Mexico, April 4, 1905. The senator, Mr. M., and I arrived at this lovely spot this afternoon at 2.38 P.M., all morally, mentally, and physically serene. I suppose we shall have to remain here a day or two to fix up for the trip inward some fifty miles in the direction of the Sierra Madre. From here we go either on horseback or muleback (it is all the same to me), which I suppose it will take about three days to reach our furthest point, where work will begin. We came to this place with a cavalry escort. From here on we will escort ourselves, as we are now out of the Yaqui Country."

He also writes: "Discoveries: The ancient gold mines of Hamammah, midway between Keneh on the Nile and Kossier on the Red Sea, exploited first about two thousand years before the Christian era, supposedly during the Ramses dynasty, second about two hundred and fifty years before the Christian era, in the time of Ptolemy Euergetes (historical evidence of both dates). Original discovery of a gold-bearing vein (telluride principally) on the San Sebastian mining property, Salvador, Central America, which turned a practical failure into a great success, the mine now producing from seven hundred fifty thousand to a million dollars per year, with a property value of from five to six millions."

Address: Harvard Club, Los Angeles, Cal.

ALBERT MONROE MOORE. Not heard from. He appears in the Lowell (Mass.) City Directory of 1904 as a "solicitor of patents and counsellor-at-law," with offices Nos. 60 and 61 Central Block, and residence 321 Westford Street.

Address: as above, Lowell, Mass.

*GEORGE WILLIAM NEAL. He died in Kittery, Me., 7 July, 1884. See Secretary's Report, No. 6.

*ROBERT RALSTON NEWELL. He died at Cambridge, 23 February, 1883. See Secretary's Report, No. 6.

*DAVID LEIGHTON ORDWAY. He died in Florence, Italy, 17 March, 1869. See Secretary's Report, No. 3.

*GEORGE FREDERICK OSGOOD. In 1885 he was stricken with locomotor-ataxia, or "creeping paralysis." His hands and feet were first affected, and he finally became entirely helpless. Toward the last his mind was also affected. He died, after ten years of suffering, 24 January, 1905.

The following remarks are by Rev. John W. Hudson, "a very close friend," and are sent by Osgood's daughter:

"As one who was intimately acquainted with Mr. Osgood for many years, it gives me pleasure to set down here a few words in affectionate memory of his sterling character.

"Like all genuine men, Mr. Osgood had marked characteristics. He was himself, and not the echo of others.

"In his early manhood he entered actively into the social life about him, and his intelligence, wit, and readiness to oblige made him a general favorite.

"He did not lose the scholarly interests of his youth. Good books were always his delight, and he kept himself abreast of the thought of the world. A fine Latin scholar, he found pleasure in reading again, in the company of younger students, the masterpieces of Latin literature. As years and cares increased, the deeper traits of his nature became strongly evident. His sobriety of thought, his desire to avoid prejudice and bias and to be just, compelled the respect even of those who differed from him in opinion. Sincerity with him was an instinct of which he was apparently unconscious. He was as close to reality as the laws of nature themselves. He could not prevaricate. Those who knew him well were sometimes surprised at the directness with which he could look an unwelcome truth in the face. He never flattered people to gain their good will, but he never lost a friend. Anything like pretentiousness was foreign to his character. Responsibilities he assumed quietly, confident of his own abilities, but he never boasted. His fellow-citizens recognized his capacity, and called him to positions of trust, but he was never an office-seeker.

"Without doubt, if he could have brought himself to adopt the arts which win popular applause, he could have been prominent in public affairs, for he had qualifications for any place which he might have desired to seek. But he loved the simple life. Plain living and high thinking were his ideal.

"There was something pathetic in his long illness, which, while it did not involve his intelligence, incapacitated him for active life. This fell upon him just as his powers reached their maturity and when he seemed ready for his best service. But, happily for him, friends and acquaintances never lost their interest in him, nor their esteem for him; and the loving care he received from those nearest and dearest, from wife and family, gave him every possible support and comfort.

"It is a privilege to have known this self-poised, unassuming, straightforward man." JOHN W. HUDSON.

*SUMNER PAINE. He was killed at Gettysburg, 3 July, 1863. See Secretary's Report, No. 2. He was given the degree of A.B. as of 1865 in 1904.

FREDERICK PASCO. "In July, 1900, resigned the superintendency of the State Institute for the Deaf and Blind at St. Augustine, and was elected superintendent of the East Florida Seminary at Gainesville. Continued here two years until June, 1902, and then resigned to resume the active work of the ministry in the Methodist Episcopal Church, South. In January, 1903, was sent as pastor of the church at Miami. In December, 1903, was made presiding elder of the East Coast District, and reappointed in December, 1904."

Address: Box 607, Miami, Fla.

*BENJAMIN MILLS PEIRCE. He died at Ishpeming, Mich., 22 April, 1870. See Secretary's Report, No. 3.

JOHN WRIGHT PERKINS. He is still Superintendent of Schools at Salem, Mass. He belongs to two secret orders and one club. His daughter is married at Manchester, Mass.

Address: 10 Beckford Street, Salem, Mass.

HENRY WILLIAM POOR. He has continued in business as banker at 33 Wall Street, New York, and 52 Devonshire Street, Boston, and as publisher of Poor's Manual of Railroads, since 1868, at 68 William Street, New York. His residences are at 1 Lexington Avenue, New York, and at Tuxedo, N.Y.; at Andover, Me.; and at "Villa Narcissus," Isola di Capri, Italy.

He is president of the Postal Telegraph Cable Company of Texas, treasurer of the United States Casualty Company, and vice-president of the Colonial Sugar Company, and is director in the Missouri, Kansas & Texas Railroad Company, the Newton & North-western Railroad Company, and Poor's Railroad Manual Company.

He is a member of the American Fine Arts Society, the American Geographical Society, the American Museum of Natural History, the American Numismatic and Archæological Society, the Sons of the American Revolution, the New England Society, the New York Botanical Society, the New York Historical Society, the New York Zoölogical Society, the New York Academy of Sciences, the Metropolitan Museum of Art, the Hakluyt Society of London, the Viking Club of London, the Icelandic Literary Society of Copenhagen, and the Royal Society of Northern Antiquaries of Copenhagen.

He is a member of these clubs in New York: the Union, University, Harvard, Racquet and Tennis, Grolier, Manhattan, Players, Lambs, Down-Town, Mid-day Lunch, "The Brook," Tuxedo, New York Yacht, Riding Club, Lawyers', the Strollers, Corinthian Yacht, Parmesener, Tuxedo Racquet and Tennis, Tuxedo Gun, Tuxedo Golf, and the Harvard Union in Cambridge.

His oldest son is a lawyer at 54 Wall Street, and his youngest graduated at Harvard in 1906. His oldest daughter is married to Captain Cochrane, of the "Leinster Regiment," British Army, and he has one grandson, born in South Africa in 1904.

Address: 33 Wall Street, New York, N.Y.

JESSE WALKER POTTS. He has continued to reside in Albany, N.Y., and has had an office, though not in business. He was very ill through the winter of 1904–05, and went away for his health. He and his sister in 1895 built a rectory for St. Peter's Church in Albany, as a memorial to their parents, and since then have borne all the expense for its care. He still adds occasionally to his valuable collection of American coins and medals, principally by proofs and gold pieces. He wishes to keep it united as a collection.

He is an official in many charitable, religious, historical, and art societies; also member of the Society of "Friends who were born in 1843," of the Albany Academy Alumni Association and of the Harvard Union at Cambridge, of three clubs in Albany and of the Harvard of New York and the Harvard of Eastern and Central New York.

Address: 342 State Street, Albany, N.Y.

CHARLES PICKERING PUTNAM. He still practises medicine in Boston, especially for children. He is still chairman of the Trustees of Children's Institutions of Boston, as he has been for four years, and a trustee since its creation in 1897, and has been for many years vice-president of the Associated Charities of Boston. For eight years he has been medical director and president of the Massachusetts Infant Asylum. He belongs to the American Pediatric Society, the Boston Medical Library, the Massachusetts Civic League, and other societies, and to the Union Boat Club. He has a country place at South Weymouth and a club camp in the Adirondacks.

Address: 63 Marlborough Street, Boston.

*CHARLES ARTHUR RAND. He died 18 January, 1884 (lost on steamer "Columbus," off Gay Head, in Vineyard Sound). See Secretary's Report, No. 6.

*JAMES SWIFT ROGERS. He died of appendicitis after a short illness, 9 April, 1905. He showed good courage when taken ill, and the doctors had to hurry him home and operate at once, but it was too late. The following was written for the Transcript by his friend, Almon D. Hodges, Jr.:

"Captain James Swift Rogers, Corporal and Sergeant of the 51st Massachusetts Volunteers in 1862, and immediately thereafter Captain of the 1st South Carolina Volunteers (afterwards the 33d U.S. C. T.), died in Boston on Sunday. He was a member of Post 10 of Worcester, Mass., G. A. R., of the Massachusetts Commandery of the Loyal Legion, of the Masonic fraternity, and of several other associations. He was born in Danby, Vt., the son of Elisha Folger and Elizabeth (Mitchell) Rogers, on March 28, 1840, but as a child went to New York City. Thence he moved to Worcester,

Mass., and remained there until he entered Harvard, where he was graduated in 1865. That same year, on June 26, he married Miss Anne B. Earle, of Worcester, by whom he had three children: two sons, who both died in early manhood; and a daughter, who is now the wife of Dr. Charles D. Knowlton, of Boston.

"After graduation at college, Captain Rogers entered upon a business career which took him to Worcester, the oil regions of Northwestern Pennsylvania, Rockport, Mass., Saratoga, N.Y., Chicago, and finally Boston, where he was connected with the Boston Book Publishing Company and where, with his wife, he found a home with his daughter, Mrs. Knowlton.

"During his later years he took up the study of genealogy, collected a vast amount of valuable material concerning all the Rogers families of New England, and published a genealogy of one branch. He joined the New England Historic Genealogical Society, and was a member of its Council at the time of his death. Of an attractive personality, strict integrity, and most lovable character, he leaves to his family and friends that best of legacies,—a beautiful memory, the only legacy which cannot be altered or misappropriated."

His classmate, Dr. Edward T. Williams, writes as follows:

"James Swift Rogers was born in Danby, Vt., March 28, 1840. He was the only son of Elisha Folger and Elizabeth Mitchell Rogers. He was descended on both sides from the best New England stock. The Rogerses were among our earliest settlers, and supposed by many to have been connected by descent or kinship to the martyr of Smithfield. His mother's people, the Mitchells, were another old New England family. Rogers fitted for college in Worcester, where his father and uncle, Dr. Seth Rogers, carried on a private hospital. They were all Friends, of the liberal persuasion, and Rogers himself was in early life a member of the Friends' Society. They were also Abolitionists. He entered Harvard in 1861, as a member of the Class of 1865. During the following year he caught the war fever, and enlisted as a member of Rev. T. W. Higginson's company of the 51st Massachusetts Volunteers. When Higginson was appointed Colonel of the 1st South Carolina Colored Volunteers, Rogers received a Captain's commission in the same regiment. His uncle, Dr. Rogers, was the surgeon. In the fall of 1863 he resigned at the instance of his friends, and returned to college to complete his course with his old Class. Between Class Day and Commencement of the year 1865 he was married at Worcester to Anne Buffum Earle, only daughter of Edward Earle, a leading manufacturer and former mayor of that city. He became the father of three children, Edward Earle, Eliot Folger, and Annie, now the wife of Dr. Charles D. Knowlton, of Roxbury. His eldest son was accidentally drowned at Rockport, Mass., in 1884. His second son graduated at Harvard in 1890. He studied abroad, and was appointed college instructor at Harvard in chemistry in 1894. He never assumed the duties of the position, however. He became ill from the effects of over-study, and died in October, 1895. These dreadful misfortunes, besides large losses of property, were most stanchly borne. James Rogers was endowed by nature with a hopeful and indomitable spirit, fortified by religious faith, and sustained by the help and sympathy of a loyal and devoted wife. He faced adversity with undaunted courage, and endured it with manly fortitude. He was an ardent lover and a warm friend. He championed all the great causes, and lent his hand and heart freely to those who needed aid and encouragement. His friends were legion. He had no enemies. The last time I saw him he seemed in all the fulness of health and vigor. He bore no traces of weakness or decay. He looked likely to live to a ripe age. He was taken sick very suddenly, Thursday, April 6, and died of appendicitis on Sunday, April 9, 1905. His death is an irreparable loss to all who knew him."

E. T. W.

Roxbury, April 10, 1905.

His funeral was impressive. A number of his classmates were present. Colonel T. W. Higginson, his Colonel, spoke with great feeling, and described how Rogers crossed a river alone in a small boat, just after a battle, to bring over a man who was signalling for rescue from the shore. Rev. W. W. Fenn, a very near and intimate friend, also spoke with enthusiasm of Rogers's loyalty as a man and a friend.

In college Rogers belonged to the O. K. and the Natural History Society; to the Horticultural Society, the Natural History Society, and the Mechanic Association while in Worcester. He was a member of the Zeta Psi also, and at the last meeting of this society in Boston he had an enjoyable time. The Grand Army Encampment of the summer of 1904 in Boston was "the time of his life to him."

He published a work, "James Rogers of New London and his Descendants," and had gathered material for many more works upon the Rogers families.

WILLIAM ROTCH. "Since the last Report I have remained in Boston. Occupation: manager of trust property and director in many corporations." He is president of seven corporations, vice-president of one, and treasurer of five. He is managing trustee of the Rotch Travelling Scholarship for Architects and a member of the Board of Managers of the Adams Nervine Asylum. He retains his membership in the Somerset Club, the Country Club, and the Boston Athletic Association. He writes he attends all the Harvard athletic events.

Address: 131 State Street, Boston.

*GEORGE BRIGGS RUSSELL. He died suddenly of apoplexy at Columbus, Ohio, 25 October, 1903. His oldest son writes:

"George Briggs Russell was born in Plymouth, Mass., September, 1843. Was graduated at Phillips Exeter Academy, and entered the Class of 1865 at Harvard College. He left college in his Sophomore year, entering the 38th Massachusetts Volunteers as Second Lieutenant and going to the front in the Civil War, seeing service at Port Hudson, La., where he was severely wounded. Later he was assigned as Acting Provost Marshal with rank of Brevet-Major U.S.V. in Washington, D.C., under General C. C. Augur, being there at the time of the assassination of President Lincoln and the execution of Wirz, of Andersonville Prison. After the war he was honorably mustered out, and entered the regular army as Captain, being assigned to the staff of General C. C. Augur as aide-de-camp with rank of Assistant Inspector-General. Here he saw service against the hostile Indians in the late '60's and early '70's, among them being the Sioux, Apache, Modoc, etc. He remained attached to General Augur's staff, stationed in the departments of Kentucky, Texas, the Platte, and Kansas, until the General's retirement in 1885, when he was assigned to his regiment, the 9th United States Infantry, which saw service during the Indian uprising in Indian Territory in 1887, and later in 1889 against the Apaches under Geronimo at San Carlos, Ariz. In 1892 he was promoted to Major of the 5th United States Infantry, and in 1897 assigned to the 14th United States Infantry as Lieutenant Colonel, stationed at Vancouver Barracks, Wash. Retiring on account of disability in 1898, he came to live in Jamaica Plain, Mass.

"He was a delightful companion, always looking on the sunny side of things. With a keen sense of humor, he coupled the ability to tell a good story, and as a raconteur there were few who could equal him. He always remembered a friend and never forgot an enemy, and was always a just but a strict disciplinarian, as those who ever were under him knew.

"In 1873 he was married to Jane Eliot, daughter of General C. C. Augur, U.S.A., and died at Columbus, Ohio, October 25, 1903. His widow and three children survive him: A. Le Baron, born 1875; Laura Howland, born 1879, who married J. M. Allen, of Evanston, Ill.; and Christopher Augur, who is now in the Senior Class at the United States Naval Academy, Annapolis, Md."

He lives in Bethel, Vt., and practises law throughout the State, and is retained by corporations in Boston. He was representative to the General Assembly of Vermont from 1884–86, was State's Attorney for Windsor County, Vermont, 1888–90. Was president of the Vermont State Bar Association 1894–95, and has published an address made by him in 1895 as president. He has been president of the National White River Bank.
He belongs to the Vermont Historical Society and the New England Historic Genealogical Society.
His son, William Stickney, is house surgeon in the Boston City Hospital.
Address: Bethel, Vt.

*GEORGE WOODBURY SWETT. He died at Bonn, Germany, 27 July, 1869. See Secretary's Report, No. 3.

THOMAS EDMUND SYMMES. He still lives in Graniteville, Mass. Is a "farmer, surveyor of land, and author." He belongs to the Orthodox Congregational, Presbyterian, and Methodist Societies, but to no clubs.

His writings are:

"The Evolution of the Christian System."
"The Creation," a poem.
"Latter Days," a poem, MSS.
"Bible Theology, or Mystery Solved."
"The World's Progress, or the Church and Home of the Blest," a poem of 3,000 lines.
"Some Astronomical and Planetological Deductions" (about 250 octavo pages of printed matter).

He replies to the Secretary's circular:

"I have considered the great end of our present being to be the preparation of ourselves for another stage of life. This has been the central thought of my life and the spur of my literary efforts.

"Since the last Class Report I have added to my astronomical manuscript some thoughts as to the constitution of the sun and some further consideration of the seeming ins and outs of the positions taken. I also answer objections urged by Professor H. M. Paul, of the Naval Department, Washington, and at one time connected with the Naval Observatory. He is considered an able mathematician and astronomer. I obtained his short review of my work through the influence of Hon. John D. Long, who was at the time Secretary of the Navy.

"I have been unable as yet to obtain any recognition of its merit, and, consequently, no patronage by means of which I could exploit the work and make its publication pecuniarily profitable. I do not consider this outcome as resulting from any falsity in the work, but rather from the indisposition of recognized astronomers to having their theories and inferences contravened by an amateur. This is not only true of astronomers, but also of theologians and people generally who have adopted views.

"I also send an 'Astronomical Challenge,' which I do not expect you will publish, if for no other reason than its length, how much soever I might desire it."

Address: Graniteville, Mass.

*JOHN KERR TIFFANY. He died in St. Louis, Mo., 3 March, 1897. See Secretary's Report, No. 9.

*MELVILLE COX TOWLE. He died at Haverhill, Mass., 20 December, 1875. See Secretary's Report, No. 5.

He belongs to the Somerset Club, to the Boston Athletic Association, of which he was president two years from 1900, to the Tennis and Racquet Club of Boston, and the Harvard Club of New York.

He writes: "Since graduation have lived in various parts of the United States, as well as some ten years in Europe. Have had a legal residence in Massachusetts, Kansas, and Maine. Have always voted the straight Democratic ticket, except that I could not stand for Bryan. Have been a candidate for four or five minor elective offices, but was always on the wrong side in the opinion of the voters. In religion I am a Liberal."

Address: 866 Beacon Street, Boston.

CHARLES HARRISON TWEED. He was for two years a banker at 24 Pine Street, New York, but retired 1 January, 1907, and lives in New York in winter and Beverly Farms, Mass., in summer. He is director or trustee in seventeen corporations, and belongs to nine clubs in New York, to three in Boston, and to the Royal Clyde Yacht Club in Glasgow. He is a member of the Class Committee.

Address: 27 William Street, New York, N.Y.

EDWARD TUFTS WILLIAMS. He belongs to the First Religious Society and the Massachusetts Medical Society. He has published: "The Science of French Conjugation," 1878; "Studies in the Leucocytes," 1903; "Additional Papers on the Blood," 1904; besides many miscellaneous papers on medical subjects.

He writes: "Was compelled to relinquish practice several years ago on account of ill-health. Since that time have been devoting myself to a series of scientific studies on the blood, the blood-making organs and the diseases which affect them. I have succeeded in demonstrating the true function of the spleen as a blood-making organ,—a subject long in dispute. I am now engaged in developing a new blood-food, from which I am expecting important results." He has published many articles in the medical journals and some pamphlets on these subjects.

Address: 125 Dudley Street, Roxbury, Mass.

GORHAM DEANE WILLIAMS. He has been practising law in Boston. He practised law from 1868 to 1889, and was engaged in manufacturing from 1882–89. He was treasurer and general manager of the Vulcan Iron Works at Charleston, W. Va., from 1900 to 1904. He has published:

"Liquor Legislation," 1885.

He returned in 1907 to Greenfield, his native place.
Address: Greenfield, Mass.

HENRY BIGELOW WILLIAMS. He lives at 56 Fenway in the winter and at Nantucket in the summer. He writes: "Since the last Class Report I have been in Boston most of the time, and busied only about my own affairs and the Homœopathic Hospital, in which I take much interest."

"I have two step-daughters, who are almost the same to me as my own daughters: Mary McBurney, married to Fred. Parker, living at Bedford, Mass.," who has four children, the two boys at St. Paul's School; "and Margaret McBurney, married to H. Remson Whitehouse," living at Ouchy, Switzerland, with one daughter. "Counting all my grandchildren, I have seven."

His own daughter, Christine Louisa Whittredge Williams, is married to John Linzee Snelling, and has a daughter and a son.

He belongs to eight clubs in Boston and to the Real Estate Exchange and to the Harvard Club in New York.

Address: 201 Clarendon Street, Boston.

JOHN CODMAN SOLEY. He is naval officer in charge of the United States Hydrographic Office at New Orleans. He was executive officer of the United States steamship "Vermont" at the New York Navy Yard, engaged in forwarding crews, during the Spanish War; consulting engineer with Ladenburg, Thalman & Co., 1899–1900; elected general manager of the Northern Alabama Railroad in August, 1900, also general manager of Birmingham & Atlantic Railroad, and later chief engineer of the same road; president and manager of the Coal and Coke Company, with headquarters at Talladega, Ala., till December, 1904, and since then at New Orleans.

He has written various publications on service matters.

Address: United States Hydrographic Office, New Orleans, La.

*FREDERIC WILLIAM SPARRELLE. He died at Key West, Fla., 11 July, 1875. See Secretary's Report, No. 5.

FREDERICK RUSSELL STURGIS. He is still in practice in New York City as a physician and surgeon. He is member and officer in many medical societies. He has published books and articles on his specialty in medicine, and is American editor of various foreign works on medicine.

Address: 116 West 55th Street, New York, N.Y.

FREDERICK HENRY THOMPSON. He has remained in Fitchburg, Mass., in the practice of medicine as physician and surgeon. He has nothing new to report.

Address: 3 Pleasant Street, Fitchburg, Mass.

*CHARLES JACKSON TRAIN. The following is from the Boston Herald: "Rear-Admiral Charles J. Train, commander-in-chief of the United States Asiatic fleet, died at Chefoo, August 4, 1906, of uræmia.

"He was born at Framingham, Mass., May 14, 1845. He entered Annapolis from this State in 1861, and was graduated in 1864. His first sea assignment was on the steam frigate 'Colorado,' then flagship of the Mediterranean squadron, from 1866 to 1867.

"He became master in 1866; lieutenant, 1868; lieutenant commander, 1869; commander, 1886; captain, 1899; and rear-admiral, 1904.

"In the Spanish War he commanded the auxiliary cruiser 'Prairie,' on which the Massachusetts auxiliaries saw active service. He also commanded the 'Puritan' and the 'Massachusetts' later.

"He was one of the scientists of the navy, and in his shore duty was in most responsible positions. He had command of the Mare Island Navy Yard, also of the naval war college.

"In 1905 he relieved Rear-Admiral Folger as commander-in-chief of the Asiatic station.

"On the recent trip of the Taft party through China, Admiral Train acted as naval escort.

"His son, Ensign Charles R. Train, a native of Maryland, graduated from Annapolis, where his father was an instructor in navigation more than twenty years ago, in 1900.

"The most sensational episode in Admiral Train's career in recent years, one which became international in its aspect, occurred in China in the fall of 1905.

"He and his son, Lieutenant Train, were victims of a savage attack by Chinese outside of Nankin. The American officers were pheasant shooting, when the admiral accidentally shot a Chinese woman, slightly injuring her. Hundreds of villagers thereupon surrounded the officers, took away their guns, knocked the admiral down in the mud, and held Lieutenant Train as hostage.

"Forty American marines, who landed as a rescue party, were attacked by a mob, who tried to pitchfork the officers. The marines were obliged to fire twice. The Chinese officials refused to restore the officers' guns, and supported the villagers.

"Nankin had been active in the movement for boycotting American goods, and was the centre of activity on the part of Chinese students.

"The Governor of Nankin later apologized to the officers, restored their guns, and punished the ringleaders of the mob.

"As commander-in-chief of the Asiatic station, the important duty of maintaining strict neutrality in Philippine waters during the Russo-Japanese War devolved upon Admiral Train. He was sixty-one years old, and would have retired from active service in May of next year. During his service of almost a score of years at sea he served on many stations."

THOMAS WREN WARD. Not heard from. He still lives in New York. He holds a '66 degree.

Address: 15 Wall Street, New York, N.Y.

JOSEPH HENRY WILLARD. He became Lieutenant Colonel in the Engineers, United States Army, 23 April, 1904, and is in charge of the fortifications at Newport, R.I., and of the breakwater, building at Point Judith, on which he made a report, in 1905, of his survey of the improvements necessary in the extension of the breakwater at the easterly or shore end for the harbor of refuge. Congress had appropriated $100,000 for the purpose in March, 1905, and had authorized a contract for the same.

Colonel Willard writes, after comments on his experiences at Harvard and his graduation from West Point in 1868, "I have spent almost all of my time far away, nearly all in fact, in the Mississippi Valley, building dams and levees and such protections against floods, that Eastern mills might get cotton to spin.

"The general idea is that army life is 'all beer and skittles,' but I have not had any long leave of absence since my graduation furlough in 1868, except for sickness: refusal always, with the flattering (?) statement that my 'services were too important just at the time to be spared.' "

Address: Newport, R.I.

*JAMES HARVEY WITHINGTON. He died at Binghamton, N.Y., 20 May, 1902. He left college near the end of Junior year, and was commissioned First Lieutenant in the U.S. C. I., 14 March, 1864; and Captain 198th Pennsylvania Volunteers, 6 December, 1864, and was in two battles. He was mustered out with his regiment, 4 June, 1865. He then went to San Francisco via Panama. He made a prospecting expedition to Prescott, Ariz. He was then employed in the San Francisco post-office for two years as captain of the night force. He was then in the brokerage business, then inspector in the Custom House, then head salesman with a wholesale stationer. In October, 1874, he started in the same business in the firm of Dutton & Withington, and continued it till about 1887. He was for some time assistant treasurer of the Gold Exchange of California. He was active in political affairs as delegate and committee-man. In 1872 he was delegate-at-large from California to the National Convention, and served on the Committee on Resolutions. He was appointed in August, 1874, Colonel on the staff of Governor Newton Booth, and again by Governor Pacheco. He was also detailed on the staff of the Major-General commanding the militia of California. About 1887 he went East to New York. He was treasurer of the Commercial Advertiser Association for two years from 1892. He was for several years business manager of the Morning Advertiser of Binghamton, N.Y., and had business in both places.

He belonged to the Odd Fellows, to the Military Order of the Loyal Legion, to the Society of Colonial Wars; to the Harvard Club of the Pacific, which he originated and in which he was a director; to the Harvard Club of New York, and also to the California Club.

GENERAL SUMMARY.

JULY, 1907.

Our Class, while in college, numbered 129. Of these, 75 were graduated in 1865, and 13 afterwards received degrees of A.B., as of that year, making 88 whose names appear in the quinquennial catalogue of 1905 as alumni of 1865.

Of this number, 11 have died since the last Report, and 39 since leaving college, leaving 49 graduated members now living. 39 of these are married, 3 are widowers, and 7 unmarried. 9 have lost their wives by death, of whom 6 have married again. Of the 88 in all, 65 married. 157 children have been born, of whom 136 are now living, as far as known.

Of the 41 temporary members, 7 have died since the last Report, and 24 are now living. 18 of these are married, 6 unmarried, 2 have married a second time. 54 children have been born, of whom 41 are now living, as far as known.

CLASS MEETINGS.

The following meetings of the Class have been held since the last Report:

MORITURI CHLOROFORM US

A little pain when the heth grows wider,
Cross to me now - for her wavelets swell,
"I may not cross" - and the voice beside her
Faintly reacheth, though heeded well.

Glad yet I knew past all doubting, truly -
A knowledge greater than grief can dim -
I know as he loved, he will love me duly -
Yea better - even better than I love him.
